

FOOTBALL AND EDUCATION

IT TENDS TO DEVELOP TRAITS OF CHARACTER

Game of Gridiron Forms Important Factor in Life by All Colleges.

BY EDWIN MAYEY, D. C. L., LL. B.

With the coming year again under way, football has taken its place in student life, and again we hear criticisms of its "brutality," the time and money expended upon it and its tinge of professionalism. Now, these criticisms are in most cases sincere and in some cases just. It is, therefore fitting that we meet them in a spirit of candor rather than of pugnaciousness.

While football is, without question, well to consider the thing itself before considering the criticisms of it. As with anything else that plays a considerable part in the life of the average student, it should be subjected to certain tests. That is to say, we should ask ourselves the question, what does it contribute to the physical, mental or moral development of the student? In that way, if any, does it tend to qualify him for citizenship?

While football is, no doubt, played primarily for recreation and amusement, it, in fact, serves a much broader purpose. It develops those characteristics of mind and spirit which go a long way toward making success in nearly every branch of life easier when it does not tend itself readily to a development of the Alphonse-Sainte type of character. And if this fact is almost entirely overlooked, I will in the present discussion throw the emphasis upon it rather than upon the more obvious physical advantages.

PLAYER MUST THINK

AND ACT QUICKLY

In order to be successful in playing football the player must form the habit of determining quickly and accurately the strong and weak points of his adversary. He must also be able to gauge accurately his own powers and to rapidly adjust them to the necessities of the situation. If captain, for instance, the still larger task of making those calculations with reference to his team. Though ample time is given him to estimate the strength and weakness of his own team, he is not sufficiently forced to "size up" the opposing team very rapidly. Indeed, this power of observation is quickened, the judgment strengthened, modesty is cultivated, far to grossly overestimate one's self or to underestimate the strength of the opposition.

THE ANYTHING-TO-WIN POLICY IS TROB.

Contrary to an all-too-prevalent belief, football does not put a premium upon brutality. The anything-to-win policy very rapidly brings a team and its institution which countenance it into disrepute. And it may not be out of place to call attention to the fact that the criticism made of the physical department of the school has been made only by those students who desire to be the school athletic teams.

James Hartwood, principal of the school, announced that the whole school will be given holiday for the occasion and the entire student body will be required to attend the meet.
